External speaker profiles

Solomon Melides – Campden BRI

Solomon has been a research scientist at Campden BRI since 2015. He has a particular interest in gluten-free production as well as general food rheology and structure.

Within his role at Campden BRI, Solomon has undergone a wide variety of work, including new product development, product reformulation, research and innovation, as well as training and courses in gluten-free and general bakery. Solomon has undertaken more fundamental research in areas such as starch retro gradation and studies on the effects of formulation and structure on satiety.

Prior to working at Campden BRI Solomon worked as a KTP associate for Brunel University in a gluten-free bakery working on product reformulation, process flow, allergen management and energy and waste optimization.

Solomon is a graduate from an industry funded Masters of Research program, with particular interest in rheology and particulate science, from the University of Nottingham, and is a graduate from the University of Nottingham Bachelors of Science Food Science degree.
